ONLY 10,190 MEN FOLLOW SAM PARKS

Housesmiths' Walking Delegate, Mounted on a Horse and Followed by Devery, Heads the Smallest Labor Day Parade New York Has Seen in Years.

Great Crowd Watched the Procession, and a Poorly Dressed Woman Reproached Parks, Saying She Starves While His Wife Wears Diamonds.

By actual count, conducted by Evening World reporters, there were 10,190 men in line in the Labor Day parade.

Of these 2,825 wore the white hats and red shirts of the Housesmiths and Bridgemen's Union, the organization controlled by Sam Parks.

It was the lightest showing in a Labor Day parade in years, owing to dissensions in labor circles over the propriety of allowing Parks to lead the parade.

Attired in a red shirt, white soft hat, white trousers, long riding boots and an elaborate white silk badge, trimmed with gold lace, Sam Parks rode at the head of the parade. Curiosity to see the man whose grip upon the New York labor situation has been so absolute was intense. The convicted walking delegate lifted his hat and bowed continually in response to applause.

DEVERY IN IT, TOO.

Parks was flanked by his assistant walking delegates of the Housesmiths and Bridgemen's Union, Tim McCarthy, Thomas Massey and Tim Dolan, on horseback. Directly behind, in a carriage, rode former Chief of Police William S. Devery. Assemblyman Richard Butler, of the Ninth District, rode in the carriage with Devery. Mrs. Sam Parks rode in an open barouche nicely appointed. She wore a black polka dot silk dress, a big white hat and a profusion of diamonds. A white silk parasol screened her eyes from the sun.

The Housesmiths and Bridgemen's Union led the parade 4,000 strong and in uniform. They are big, active men, and made a splendid appearance. Maenherchor Hall, the headquarters of the Housesmiths and Bridgemen's Union, was the assembly place of that organization. Parks was around early in the morning directing things.

"This," he said, "is my day. If I find anybody giving information to the newspapers there will be somebody hurt."

Mrs. Parks reviewed the marching men at Park avenue. The men seemed to know her and cheered her mightily. At the Park Circle, while the parade was forming, Mrs. Parks held a reception that was marred only by the appearance of a meanly attired woman with two children, who broke through the police lines and loudly denounced Parks.

Walking up to the man she shook her fist at him and shouted: "Sam Parks, you have taken the bread out of the mouths of our children and your wife wears diamonds."

The police forced the woman back of the lines before she had a chance to say more. She asserted that she was the wife of one of the men following Parks in line, wearing a uniform that cost him $4.50, while her children's feet were almost through their shoes. The outbreak of the woman caused a great deal of hissing, which was promptly drowned by the cheers of Parks's adherents.

PARKS ATTACKS PHOTOGRAPHER.

Another diversion was caused by a photographer who set up his machine and tried to take a picture of Mrs. Parks. The walking delegate saw him and went after him with a riding whip.

The warm weather and bright sunshine drew an enormous crowd of spectators. The sidewalks of Fifth avenue were jammed from Central Park down to Washington Square two hours before the parade got under way, the overflow extending back into the side streets. Madison Square, where the reviewing stand was erected, was jammed with people.

The crowd was representative of the occasion, composed of the wives and friends of the marchers and the great laboring public generally. Thousands of union men who did not parade because of the Parks trouble surrounded the reviewing stand and assembled at the formation point, but no demonstration was made.

Before starting for the parade the housesmiths and bridgemen arranged to leave the line at some point to be determined upon and march across town to the plant of the J. B. & J. N. Cornell Iron Works, at Twenty-sixth street and Eleventh avenue, a hostile concern, for the purpose of making a demonstration. An extra police guard was sent to the iron works when this information reached the authorities, although the men denied that they were bent on mischief.

After the parade the housesmiths and bridgemen went to Schuetzen Park, near Glendale, N. J., where they were the guests of an organization calling itself the Don't Worry Club.

Representatives of the following unions were in line: Housesmiths and Bridgemen, Derrickmen, Pointers and Hoisting Engineers, Horseshoers, Cement Laborers, Tar, Felt and Water Proofer, Laborers' Protective Union, Salamander Club, Metal Lathers, Amalgamated Sheet Metalworkers, Amalgamated Carpenters, International Truck Drivers, Glass Workers and miscellaneous trades.

Just after the last marcher had passed in review before Parks and his aides the crowd gathered around Devery, who stood in his barouche with Assemblyman Butler at Parks's right and demanded a speech. The "Big Bug" was not at all loth, but gratified the wishes and began to speak, passion written on his face.

DEVERY ADVOCATES A BIG JOB.

"Workingmen," said he, "we want to decide to-day to throw down the press. It is no friend of the workingman and only seeks to debase and degrade him. We want to throw it down just as hard as we do those dirty grafters of politicians, and never forget it. I want this day to remain in your brain and I want you to bury it in your hearts. Remember, 'United we stand; divided we fall.'"

Great cheers followed this, and cries of "Give it to Murphy!" "Clear them out!" "Throw them down!" and the like.

He continued: "Why, you didn't even have police enough to keep your lines straight. They're all right when they want you, but when you want something they're all wrong. Remember this on election day and throw those grafters and thugs down who would do us wrong. Don't forget it."

Following the speech there were cheers and shouts, many of them directed for "The next Mayor!" and "Hurray for the Big Bug!"

ATHLETES MAKE WORLD RECORDS

Fifteen Thousand People at Tailin Games at Celtic Park See New Marks Hung Up by New Yorkers.

HILLMAN RUNS 440 YARDS OVER HURDLES IN 55 3-5S.

Jim Mitchel Throws Fifty-six-Pound Weight 38 Feet 5 Inches, and Ewing Gets Jumping Record.

(Special to The Evening World.) Celtic Park, L. I., Sept. 7.—Fully fifteen thousand people gathered to see the revival of the Tailin Games, Ireland's famous sports of ancient times, this afternoon. The big grand stand was jammed to suffocation and the big arena was entirely surrounded by a crowd several rows deep. It was a record-breaker for attendance at an athletic meet in this city.

Three world's records were by the board early in the day. Harry Hillman, the tall, clean-limbed sprinter of the New York A. C., ran over the hurdles for 440 yards in the astonishing time of 55 3-5 seconds. For 200 yards he went with the speed of an antelope. Then he faltered, but managed to finish gamely and a great roar of appreciation. He beat the second man Charles Bacon, of the Greater New York I. A. C., by nearly fifty yards. The old record was 56 2-5 seconds.

"Big Jim" Mitchel, the veteran weight thrower of the New York A. C., was the next man to attempt long-throwing the great distance of 35 feet 6 inches, beating the former record held by John Kyle, of Tipperary, Ireland, by four inches. Mitchel also created a new American record for putting the 45-pound stone with a put of 31 feet 1-4 inches.

Ewing Gets Record Too. Then Ray C. Ewing, another elongated athlete of the New York A. C., hung up a new record for three standing broad jumps. He leaped 35 feet 3-4 inches, beating the old record held by himself by one and one-half inches.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 7.—Sig. Marconi, who is a guest of the World's Fair management, said this afternoon that he thought it would be possible to establish a communication with London by wireless telegraph stand on the Exposition grounds.

Before going to meet President Francis, Marconi said: "I think it will be possible to send wireless messages from St. Louis to the coast next year. It will be possible to send them from St. Louis to London with one relay, and that at a coast station. I cannot say what we shall do until after to-day's conference."

(Special to The Evening World.) POLO GROUNDS, Sept. 7.—Enthusiasm by the Giants' victory scored over Ned Hanlon's Brooklyn team in the borough across the bridge this morning, the baseball fans of New York City made an early morning of the gates here this afternoon. They lined down Eighth avenue and the ticket sellers were kept as busy as they were several Saturdays ago, when 25,000 paid to see the Giants and Pittsburgh battle. It looked as though the record figures would go on a hour before the game.

It was the second last time New Yorkers had the opportunity to see the favorites in a game, and the crowd was bent on showing its appreciation of the team which has kept them interested all summer. To win this afternoon was the aim of McGraw. He did not intend taking any chances, and Joe McGinnity, the man with the iron arm, was on his mind to send in to work. And Joe got a great reception when he began warming up. The demonstration was something akin to hero worship on the part of the fans.

Ned Hanlon wanted to win too, and he had a staff of twirlers out early evening. "California" Schmidt, looked the logical candidate, but it was game time before Hanlon's mind was spoken. First Inning.

Strang went out on a hunt, McGinnity to McGann. Sheekard rapped a three-bagger to left center. On Dobbs's slow hit to Babb "Sheek" scored, but the batter was out. Doyle fouled to McGann. One run.

Browne fanned. Van fied to Dahlen. McGann singled to center. Dobbs made a home running catch from Mertes. No runs.

Second Inning. Dahlen swiped at three curves. Lauder jumped on Gessler's rap. Gilbert handled Jordan's bounce. No runs.

Third Inning. Ritter fied to Mertes. Lauder was under a ducky foul from Schmidt. Browne made the most extraordinary catch of the season, robbing Strang of a home run with a one-handed catch as he leaped across the ropes. No runs.

Sheekard grabbed Bresnahan's sky-scram. McGinnity drew No. 2 out. He was caught a mile stealing. Browne hit safely at second. Van bounced to Strang. No runs.

Fourth Inning. Sheekard fied to Browne. Browne also caught Dobbs. Van came in for Doyle and nailed a drive. No runs.

McGann drew a walk. Dahlen by magnificent work, got Mertes's grounder and made a double play. Babb bounced to Schmidt. No runs.

Fifth Inning. Dahlen was safe on his hit, and Joe Babb, Gessler fanned. Jordan fied to Van. Browne caught Ritter. No runs.

Lauder operated with a hit to center and Gilbert forced Lauder. Dahlen to Jordan. Bresnahan fied to center. Dahlen caught McGinnity. No runs.

Six Inning. Strang walked and was caught beautifully. Bresnahan to Babb. Sheekard walked by the grace of Tim Ritter. Dahlen fied to Babb. No runs.

Browne made his second hit. Sheekard and robbed McGann of three bases by a catch in Bucklefield. No runs.

Seventh Inning. Babb retired Doyle by a great stop. Van made the greatest catch of his life, grabbing with his left hand a line-drive from Dahlen that he had to run a hair's breadth for. Gilbert got Gessler's grounder. No runs.

Jordan gave Ritter the "kiss" and fied to Babb. No runs.

Doyle fied to Babb. No runs.

Doyle fied to Babb. No runs.
